June Issue Easy-to-Read

The contents of the Journal have vastly improved whereas the feather in the cap on the designing front has been the new easy-to-read June 2006 format with the bigger font size and adequate spacing between the lines. Keep up this reader-friendly style.

—CA. T. Gopalakrishnan

I am delighted to see the quality of the journal improving continuously both in terms of rich content and packaging. The June 2006 Issue on NGO was very informative. The article titled 'empowered board for an empowered NPO' authored by CA. Puja Wadhwa is worth mentioning. The ICAI should form a cell to cater to the specific accounting needs of NGO sector. Let me also suggest a special issue on 'Real Estate and Role of CAs'.

—CA. Rakesh Kumar Singh

Journal Now More Useful for Students and Members

The Journal is proving to be immensely useful for both CA students & member, thanks to the topic coverage and particularly the sections like 'For Your Information', 'International Update', 'EAC Opinion' and the newly introduced 'Students' Corner', which is concise but very informative.

—Shahzad Malik

Article Assistant (Nasik)

The May 2006 issue of the Journal was very inspiring and informative. I would like to congratulate the Editorial Board for starting a separate section for students (Students' Corner) to keep the students aware of the important information relevant to them. The primer on 'Right to Information Act' and 'Salient Features of Amendments made through The Chartered Accountants (Amendment) Act, 2006' was really enlightening.

—Harsh R. Rathi, CA. Student

Article on Time Management

The article on 'Time Management' in the June 2006 issue was a must read for Chartered Accountants, who are under increasing work pressures in these days. The next article in this line may be on 'Yoga'.

—CA. Shrenik Shah

I am a 2nd year Bachelor Degree student (Economics) but I read your Journal regularly to update my knowledge. In the June 2006 Issue, the article on Time Management authored by Aruna Chandraraju has helped me complete my work in time.

—Rantu Chetia
Student (Dibrugarh)

The article on Time Management presented quite 'practical, handy and effective' techniques. These techniques are helping me become a good "time accountant".

—Mohammad Shahid Mattoo
CA student

More Improvement Needed

Notwithstanding the recent adulatory references in the Journal about its improvement, I will give only two cheers to the Editorial Board. I will reserve the 3rd cheer when the some shortcomings like 'very lengthy articles', 'overlapping of information in some articles', incomprehensible notifications or other information at times, some errors of language editing are done away with.

—CA. B. P. Bajan
