57 Momentous Years

Kudos to the editorial team of CA for putting together excellent features '57 Momentous Years—Some Reflections', and the inspiring profile of the first woman accountant of India Ms. R. Sivabhogam under the 'Women in Accountancy' section in the July 2006 Issue. It was like revisiting the glorious past of the profession. Could we have more such features?

It was really interesting to know the various phases of our Institute and the profession over the last 57 years (CA, July 2006). It was particularly interesting to see the photographs of past presidents taken on important occasions in the years gone by.

It is great that the Journal is providing matters of interest pertaining to the past, present as well as the future to members and students alike. The feature '57 Momentous Years' nicely presented the progress made by the Institute and the profession, and particularly the services rendered by our former presidents and other great personalities from different fields over the past several decades. We are highly indebted to all of them.

Focus on Members in Small Towns

I congratulate the ICAI, firstly for ensuring timely delivery of the Journal to us, and secondly for the vast improvement in all respects of value-added features and articles, look and feel, and the new reader-friendly typeface. I would like to suggest the introduction of a regular feature highlighting the professional opportunities available in mofussil towns, which will be of great help to small-town professionals like me.

Welcome Changes in the Journal

I can see a lot of welcome changes in our Journal. The 'Women in Accountancy' column is a valuable addition. I wish this section brings to light those areas where professional women like me — who, because of some reasons, cannot take up a regular job — can still pursue a career by working online from home.

— CA. Lavanya Nandakumar

The articles in the Journal are proving to be immensely useful to members, particularly to new entrants to the profession. As a new member trying to set up practice, I would appreciate if an article focusing on all aspects of the process of setting up of new practice and associated challenges is regularly published in the Journal. Perhaps a column could be introduced in which members with successful practices can share personal experiences from the initial stages of their careers. This would be of great help to new entrants.

'CA'— Alphabets of Trust

The words 'CA — Alphabets of Trust' is very appealing and would help to further strengthen the image of the Journal. I hope you will provide a full-page print of these words with the CA logo, so that members can laminate it and display it in their office.
